

Nice To Be Back

We have only been back in the USA for a little over 2 weeks, but we've already experienced what seems like an entire summer's worth of activities!

We are enjoying seeing everyone... friends and family and supporters.

We moved our belongings to Taichung on May 21 and then returned to Taipei for a few days to tie up loose ends and visit with people. We stayed with friends Bart and Sarah and it worked out really well. Our flight left at a reasonable hour and we were able to get a good night of rest before the flight and then leisurely make our way to the airport in the morning. Casey Bell came up from Taichung to meet us and drive our van back to Taichung so we'd have it there when we return in July. Our flights connected with very short layovers and it was easily the best trip we have had yet. We never mentioned in a report that Angie was able to get early leave from her job at Bethany school and so we were all able to travel together. Our kids are all "so-pro" with air travel and make it easy on us and the wary passengers around us who expect a family of 6 to be far more disruptive. Such blessings.

We can't put into words what it was like to pack so rapidly and make a big move and at the same time try to transition out of the church we've been involved with for 13+ years. I won't even try.

Some Highlights

Zachary turned 14 on May 7th. He is growing in wisdom and stature. He is a little concerned about changing schools this fall but he has found reasons to be optimistic, too.

We had a Good-Bye party in our building. We have gotten to know so many families through our outreach there over the years. It was a very special time and a good reminder that our actions and smiles are a big part of our testimony.

Mollie's last day of Taiwanese school—She had a great year and made many good friends. Her entire 1st grade class will be together for 2nd grade next year and she will miss everyone although she's excited to go to an "English school with a Chinese class instead of a Chinese school with an English class".

We said good-bye to our intern, Kasey Darrow, but we were back in Joplin just in time to attend her wedding and greet her as Kasey Longing.

We have already visited my grandpa in Iowa. We are pleased that he is doing well in some areas, but he has severe speech confusion and is very frustrated by this. We played cribbage with him and he won, of course.

We'll be busy throughout our stay in the USA visiting churches throughout the Midwest and trying to catch up with friends and family. Hope to see you soon!

A Note from Team Expansion's President

Dear Fellow-Laborers,

During a recent trip to Southern California, just when I was trying to make good time on the freeway, I hit a gridlock. Then it happened: my "traffic-aware" GPS asked me if I wanted to take an alternate route to avoid "some bad traffic ahead." Duh. Soon I was sailing along a set of scenic switchbacks on a hilly backroad that I had never heard of before. And just when I began to wonder where in the world I was, a right turn revealed the destination I was seeking!

GPS devices had been around for years, but TRAFFIC-AWARENESS was new for me. As I reflected, I wondered -- what if Team Expansion could act as a "traffic aware" guidance system for your church and your favorite missionary? What if God enabled us to help you figure out the opportunities, challenges, and barriers to cross-cultural work, then power you up to be all the more effective in conjunction with your favorite Team Expansion missionary. Well guess what: That's exactly what we're in the business of doing! And Emerald Hills, our home base, is our center of operations for that mandate. Our International Services team contacts your worker regularly to coach, support, and hold him or her accountable. And your worker networks with a host of folks throughout the whole organization for mutual "peer mentoring" and networking. Today, we're thankful for the way you undergird your favorite Team Expansion missionary to tackle the work. May God bless you this week as you labor for him!!!!

Doug Lucas, President—Team Expansion
